Friendship is considered one of the most important and best relationships that an individual has in society, because the qualities that bring friends together are noble and great qualities such as affection, love, loyalty and altruism, and the presence of a friend in a person's life is something essential and very important for young and old. He keeps the secret of his friend, and whoever covers his faults, seeks excuses for him, gives him advice, supports him in times of sadness, and supports him in times of joy. When he responds to your hearing the word friendship, he imagines you a beautiful relationship mixed with love, joy, and safety.

Situations are what show a person the truth of friendship. In many cases, friends go through many situations, at which time the true feelings and intentions hidden within a friend towards his friend appear, and then a person knows whether that person deserves to be called a friend, or that he is just a passing person who does not deserve that word. ; Because it is larger than his size, it is known that a true friend does not differentiate between himself and his friend, and he is the one who sacrifices himself in order to help his friend and stand by him in good times and bad, while the unreal friend always makes excuses, and when you need him you cannot find him, and in the same way These situations drop the masks, and the faces appear as they really are.
