According to the Food and Agriculture Organisation, we waste more than a third of the food we produce. A group of graduate students at Lund University wants to change that fact. They have come up with a way to use old fruits and vegetables. They use food that is about to go to waste. It may help people who do not have a lot of access to food.

Food Powder is dried powdered fruits and vegetables, which can be given to people in need after natural disasters. It can also be distributed in low-resource areas where fresh food is difficult to find.

Kent Ngo, one of the students who developed Food Powder, says they are not producing something innovative. Powdered food has been around since the early days of astronauts. The students are rethinking food waste. One group of students went to farmers and sellers to get fruit. Another group of students tested different techniques of drying and powdering the food. They decided on spray drying it, and then changing it into a powder. From there, the students looked at ways to distribute the Food Powder, through government support.

Gerald Perry Marin, a member of the group, grew up in the Philippines. He had seen how hurricanes cut people off from their food supply, and how important it was to have access to food. "Today a bag for humanitarian disasters contains nutrients such as strawberry jam, peanut butter and peas in tomato sauce. We think that an easily transported pack of cheap dried food powder with high nutritional value would be a better choice," Marin says.

The students have got support from the government in the Philippines, and they are currently drying calamansi, a citrus fruit that tastes like a mix of lemon and orange. The students also started working with the United Nations, to try to reach more people and countries that could benefit from the Food Powder project. They are working to use calamansi powder in food products, like cake mixes and ice cream. "I was a bit surprised that the calamansi powder tasted so good," Ngo says. "I can't wait for the mango and pineapple powder."
